How to Use the Maps of Jerusalem

The five maps of Jerusalem, forming the frontispiece of this volume, are intended to facilitate the study of the history of that city by enabling the reader to see the locations of the chief buildings at four different periods of its history. By placing any one of these maps over another, so that the surrounding lines fall exactly one upon the other, a comparison can be made between the distinctive features of any two or more periods. The map forming the background shows the topographical characteristics of the various strata on which the city has been built. By placing a sheet of white paper over this map the features of any one of the maps printed in color will appear more distinct.
